Rural West Bengal

IMMUNITY BOOSTING CAMPS IN RURAL WEST BENGAL

Amid the current trying times of severe health concerns globally, we all realise the importance of boosting immunity amidst communities particularly in the rural belts of the country.

Sri Sathya Sai Aarogya Vahini, Mobile Hospital Service, West Bengal in collaboration with the Divine Will Foundation and Annapoorna Trust is addressing rural communities relentlessly with Primary Health Care initiatives in multiple locations of Rural West Bengal.

While the world is reeling under the attack of covid-19, West Bengal unfortunately also faced a harsh cyclone in addition, making this exercise all the more essential.

Beneficiaries not only are given free doctor consultations and medicines, but are also provided with protein rich supplements and essential commodities for health and hygiene to fight against the pandemic.

AUGUST 9TH

MONTHLY GROCERY KITS FOR SCHOOL COOKS

We all know that the covid-19 pandemic has been very harsh to a large section of the population in various ways. The cooks across various schools are no exception to this, as their needy families are unable to make their ends meet. Annapoorna is working towards providing these families a monthly grocery kit (containing rice, lentils, wheat flour, cooking oil, salt, sugar and basic spices) every month for the next 1 year.

The Annapoorna volunteers in Sivakasi have been really active even during the ongoing pandemic. They have been distributing food parcels to the needy on every sunday during the lockdown. They distributed 135 food parcels across the town on August 9th.
